The Introduction:

A copywriting one-liner is a long phrase of persuasive words that can be inserted into almost any ad that will influence people to visit your web site and/or persuade them to buy your product. You can just add your own specific product information to the beginning, middle and/or end of them.

These copywriting one-liners are perfect if you're targeting regular consumers or business owners. They are tiny and adaptable enough to fit into any niche ad copy. Even if you just want to improve a small part of your ad like a headline, opening, bullet, closing, p.s., etc.

Each one-liner comes with a section of suggested content to add about your particular product, service or website. Most of the suggested content is in between the parenthesis of each copywriting one-liner.

Here are some examples and explanations of the suggested content:

(product name) - The name of your product. For example, Copywriting One-Liners is too good to be true.

(product type) - The category your product fits into. Some examples: ebooks, beds, cars, vacations, etc.

(product benefit) - The benefit(s) your product offers to the consumer. For example, lose 3 inches off your waist.

(no.) - The number that relates to your product. For example, you have 3 days to order. (or) You'll make $10 on every sale.

(type of person) - The name of a targeted single person. For example, a former detective taught me about this.

(types of people) - The name of a targeted group of people. For example, most business owners are dead wrong about this.

(subject) - The topic or niche that's related to your product. For example, this diet plan has nothing to do with starving yourself.

(person's name) - The real name of a person or famous person related to your product. For example, Larry Dotson even endorses my new course.

($) - The cost of your product or something related. For example, last year, I paid a personal trainer $100 to learn this but you won't pay anywhere near that.
(date) - The month, day and year of something related to your product. For example, this sale will end on July 15, 2008 if it's sold out or not.

(positive/negative situation) - The situation related to your product. For example, those business owners who ignore this SEO software will be out of business by 2009.

The best thing is that you can use these copywriting one-liners in all kinds of ads. You can easily insert these short but powerful copywriting one-liners into any sales letter, email or classified ad to help increase your clickthrough traffic and conversion rates. Or use them to write entirely new ads. The choice is yours.

The most important thing is to use these copywriting one-liners with an open mind. You can change, rewrite or edit the one-liners how you wish to fit your unique business or advertisement. They are small and versatile enough for you to easily add your own product information, benefits, features, proof and examples. Plus, you can rewrite them to add your own personality, thoughts or ideas.
